Lyrics & Music by Tom Jones, Gordon Mills, Iyiola Babatunde

8 bar intro

as sung by Tom Jones

Your captivating eyes
The clever way they smile stops him in his tracks
And add your pretty face you keep him in his place
He'd do anything you ask

They've broken the mold, more precious than gold
When you're standing there the world disappears

It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares, you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever leave you

Be careful what you do he's so in love with you,
you might tear him apart
To watch the way you move, it's obvious that you were made for breaking hearts
The pout of your lips, those soft fingertips
The curve of your waist, you're perfectly made

[Repeat: x3]

It would be a crime to ever let you go
He should be inclined to keep you very close
No one else compares you're a cut above the rest
He'd be such a fool if he should ever leave you

Your captivating eyes
The subtle way you smile sets him in a spin
The subtle way you smile
